1. If you suffer a work-related injury, tell your supervisor right away. Reporting promptly helps prevent problems and delays in receiving medical benefits, including medical care you may need to avoid further injury. If your employer does not learn of your injury, you could lose your right to receive workers compensation benefits
2. If it is a medical emergency, go to an emergency room right away. Tell the health care provider who treats you that your injury or illness is job related.
3. If it is not a medical emergency go to an approved physician below for treatment

1. Immediately notify the employer in writing of accidental injury or occupational disease and request medical services. Failure to give notice or to accept medical services may deprive the employee of the right to compensation.
2. Give promptly to the employer, directly or through a supervisor, notice of any claim for compensation for the period of disability beyond the third day after the accident. In case of fatal injuries, notice must be given by one or more dependents of the deceased or by a person on their behalf.
3. You are entitled, if required, to the services of a hospital or physician of your choice.
4. In case of failure to reach an agreement with the employer in regard to compensation under the law, file application with the Industrial Accident Board for a hearing on the matters at issue within two years of the date of accidental injury or one year of knowledge of the diagnosis of an occupational disease or an ionizing radiation injury. All Forms can be obtained from the Office of Workers' Compensation.
